General questions/key insights

Q: The exercices are sometimes more difficult than the lecture.

Thanks for your feedback. I wonder if you mean that (i) the exercises in the activity list are harder than the ones in the lecture, or (ii) the activities in class are harder than the activity list?

I'll presume that you mean (i) because the exam-like questions are usually hard. If so, I just want to reiterate that these questions are harder than the exam itself to "make you think".

The activities during the lecture are closer to the "real exam", so if you can get those, you should be fine.

Why are the "exam-like" questions so hard? I made them last year and did not have the time to update them. It was my first year lecturing, and I thought it would be good to offer a challenge to the students.

Unfortunately, it caused some students some frustration. Sorry if this is your case.

The exam will be easier than the current exam-like questions.
